Kimberly-Clark Corporation wins United Way Summit Award for Community Investment

BALTIMORE (May 15, 2008) - At the 2008 United Way Community Leaders Conference today, United Way of America presented Dallas-based Kimberly-Clark Corporation [NYSE: KMB], with its highly prestigious accolade - the Summit Award - recognizing the company's outstanding commitment to United Way and communities across the country.

"Kimberly-Clark Corporation continues to make a difference in countless lives through their philanthropic leadership. They've made supporting United Way and communities part of their culture," said United Way of America President and CEO Brian A. Gallagher. "Kimberly-Clark is a valued national partner and model of corporate social responsibility."

While there is a clear corporate commitment to United Way, Kimberly-Clark's campaigns are truly grassroots in nature since they are designed and executed at the local level by enthusiastic employees who know what outreach effort will work best in their environments and who are aware of local community needs. In most communities where Kimberly-Clark operates, the company's support is critical, as it is the largest or almost largest corporate contributor to United Way. For example, in Jenks, OK, Kimberly-Clark represents 75 percent of the overall community's campaign goal.

Kimberly-Clark employees take their commitment to United Way seriously and get very involved in their campaigns by employing creative fundraising events like bake sales, teddy bear drives, pumpkin-decorating contests, volunteer days and much more to engage employees year-round. Additionally, the company also matches employee pledges to United Way dollar for dollar.

"Caring is what we do - and who we are. Whether we're helping a mom care for her newborn baby, helping families with colds and flu, or supporting local health and human-service organizations - taking care of people is our business and our passion," said Thomas J. Falk, Kimberly-Clark Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. "What's especially gratifying about this award is that United Way of America has recognized the caring spirit of our people and our company."

As part of the 2008 Spirit of America® Awards, now in their 21st year, the Summit Awards recognize United Way National Corporate Leader (NCL) companies that exhibit exceptional performance in:

- Corporate Philanthropy - strategic corporate philanthropy through overall corporate contributions including financial giving, expertise and in-kind gifts.

- Community Volunteerism - outstanding companywide culture and demonstrated commitment to actively improve communities by mobilizing employees to volunteer.
