Who's The Boss? Inspired Moms!

DALLAS, October 16, 2012 - In honor of National Bosses Day, Huggies® MomInspired® and Tory Johnson (Spark & Hustle, New York Times bestselling author and "Good Morning America" contributor) have teamed up to welcome the latest group of "bosses" to the family. Now in its third year, Huggies MomInspired is a grant program that awards mom entrepreneurs with funding and resources for their own unique baby or child care idea.

Today, Huggies MomInspired Grant Program will officially announce 11 new grant recipients with the help of Tory Johnson at the All Baby & Child Kids Expo in Louisville, Ky. Each recipient will receive $15,000 to help fund their innovative business, product or service they created to help make life as a parent easier and more enjoyable.

"I'm thrilled to be a part of this program that is a leading example of how to help support women in business," Johnson said. "It's efforts like Huggies MomInspired that can help moms turn their passion and purpose into profit. After all, 84% of mompreneurs said becoming a mom encouraged innovation and creative thinking.1"

Johnson, a mompreneur herself, started her own business with very limited resources and understands the importance of programs like Huggies MomInspired to help provide funding to women in business - since women still receive well under 10 percent of equity financing2.

"Many women find it hard to get capital to fund a new business," Johnson said. "In fact, a recent Huggies MomInspired survey found that three out of four mompreneurs reported using their own personal savings to start their company.3"

In addition to the grant that the program provides, this new group of women will receive business advice from Maria Bailey, author, radio and TV personality and founder of BlueSuitMom.com, as well as support from Kimberly-Clark to promote their ideas. The 2012 grant recipients include:

- Aqueduck: Created by Susanna Lee, the Aqueduck extends the water in the sink and bathtub so that it is more accessible to children.

  comfortably by mom and child. It is a fun and stylish tool to help moms teach young children to stay within arm's reach.
